Solution Architecture:

Solution architecture is a complex and consuming process, with many sub-processes, that are useful in bridging the gap between business problems and technology solutions. Its goals are to:

- Find the best technological solution to solve existing business problems.
- Describe the structure, characteristics, behavior, and other aspects of the software to project stakeholders.
- Define features, development phases, and solution requirements.
- Provide specifications according to which the solution is defined, managed, and delivered.
